

be settled; it is then pumped into the fire.

The North Dakota came in a fire once before since she was launched in November, 1907. That was on the 13th of last May, at Boston Navy Yard, when a red hot rivet dropped into ground cork in one of the after magazines, while the ship was in dry dock for alteration. The prompt response of her 250 men to the ship's fire call resulted in quick extinguishment, and averted the threatened calamity. The North Dakota's magazines are lined with cork, sheathed inside.

Captain Albert Gleaves, who commands the North Dakota, is a Tennesseean, who formerly commanded the St. Louis, and is now in command of the North Dakota. He has had thirty-seven years of naval service, including nineteen years at sea.

Expected at Old Point. The North Dakota is still at anchor off Rumble Shoal lighthouse, and before dark her hull was barely visible from Old Point. Nobody is allowed to come aboard the vessel, and as Admiral Schreeder declines to discuss the details of the accident, pending a report from the board of inquiry, practically nothing is known ashore concerning the scene in the fire room at the time of the explosion.

It is expected that the North Dakota will come into Old Point to-night. The news of the explosion seemed to cause little excitement at Old Point, and the boat racks arranged for this afternoon were pulled off on schedule time, with the crews of all the ships except the North Dakota and New Hampshire watching and cheering.

STORIES OF HEROISM

Men on Battleship Complimented by Captain over Their Behavior.

Newport News, Va., September 8.—The North Dakota came in to Old Point to-night at 7:15 o'clock. She did not drop her gangway, and the only boat to come ashore brought dispatches. It is said that Admiral Schreeder gave orders that when the battleship passed between the North Dakota and his flagship, the Connecticut, should not be picked up by the operators on the other ships. Stories of heroism among the officers and men were circulated on the wharf, in spite of the presence of the officers. It is said that Seaman G. C. Greenway distinguished himself by wading into the blazing fire room, while the water was being pumped in, and shutting off the oil. Seaman W. Rader is said to have crawled into the engine room and brought out a burning fuse. Mr. Andrews and Joseph Minigan, a chief water, is credited with rescuing three other men, who had been burned, or overcome by the deadly fumes of gas arising from the oil. Frank Flowers is reported to have been the first to get into the fire room to aid the injured men.

It is said that after the fire was under control, Captain Gleaves mustered his ship's company on deck, and made them a touching address, complimenting them upon their behavior, and saying that he was proud of his men.

Ship Returns to Hampton Roads. Norfolk, Va., September 8.—The North Dakota returned to Hampton Roads at 7 o'clock to-night. Her crew spent the entire day fighting the fire in her engine room, and it was made as much as possible to prevent the ship sailing with the first division on Saturday to participate in battle practice off the Virginia Capes.

Road Gets New Equipment. The Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad, which recently ordered much new equipment for its line, has just received a new dining car to be operated on its train leaving here at noon for Washington. President William H. White and other officials of the company, who inspected it yesterday, admitted that it was equal to the best built for the leading railroads in the United States.

Not Seriously Hurt. James Allen, colored, while attempting to get off a Broad and Main street car to-night at the corner of Second Street, fell and was rendered unconscious. Dr. Leonard, who was passing, treated him before the fire engine could arrive. Allen was found not to be seriously hurt, and was carried by the ambulance to his home, 625 North Fifth Street.

You hear people speak of some boys as being "at the awkward age" or the "hard-to-fit age."

To-day there is no such age if the boy comes to this store for his clothes. Here are the suits that were made on boys' models (not men's models cut down here and shortened there). Long-legged boys, long-armed boys or thick-set boys, thin boys and fat boys—all can find their right suit here.

The new fall garments are in, and you'll be as proud as he when he puts them on.

ANXIOUS TO SHOW EXTENT OF TRADE

Chamber's Idea to Display Richmond-Made Goods to Home Folk and Visitors.

President Henry W. Wood, of the Chamber of Commerce, desiring to stimulate the trade of manufacturers, jobbers and retail merchants of Richmond, has requested the business enterprise committee of the chamber to consider plans whereby an exhibit of Richmond-made goods and those distributed by local jobbers may be made in the most attractive way for at least a week, so as to inform local and out-of-town people of the extent of manufacturing and distribution in this city. To carry out his plan, Mr. Wood is endeavoring to get the co-operation of all the principal merchants on Broad Street to the extent of giving the committee the use of their display windows for one week, preferably the first week of October. The exhibit will be made possible by the provision of the Council for the illumination of Broad Street by the municipal light plant.

Business Manager William T. Dabney, of the Chamber of Commerce, yesterday night held a meeting of the committee of the Retail Merchants' Association and outlined the plan. Although the board could take no action at the time, the members were most favorably impressed with the scheme. It was referred to a committee which will distribute reports favorably within the next few days. It is the idea of the chamber that more real good could be accomplished for all business interests of the city if the retail merchants take the initiative. An officer of the association said last night that there was every reason to believe that Mr. Wood's plan would be carried out in full.

gessional District greeted his questioners.

"Doesn't this put the Hamilton Club in a peculiar position, turning down one of their own members?" was ventured.

"Are you trying to get me to make a speech?" Senator Lorimer said, in a calm, even tone. "I have nothing to say."

As the newspaper men retired, Senator Lorimer said: "If I decide to make a statement, I shall be glad to give it to you."

The news of the refusal of Colonel Roosevelt to attend the Hamilton Club banquet created a flurry among the customers of the bank, apprised of the occurrence, but all the officials of the institution copied the attitude of their chief, and conservatively had "nothing to say."

Still, after 4 o'clock, while the train bearing Colonel Roosevelt and the Hamilton Club delegation was speeding to the city, Senator Lorimer returned.

Again Declines to Talk. Still calm, still smiling, the Senator passed by another group of newspaper men, held a short conference with some of his subordinates and turned to the door. He paused long enough to say to the potential questioners, "I have not a word to say."

One or two questions were started, but were cut short by the repetition of "Not a word, not a word," and the Senator strode down the stairs and up the street in the opposite direction from the banquet hall in the Congress Hotel.

Diligent questioning revealed that the Senator's banker was believed in his office to be going back to Platteau Bay on an early evening train.

When the delegation of Hamilton Club members arrived at the hotel, they were informed that Senator Lorimer would not attend the banquet.

The comforting intelligence did not come officially, but was accepted as final.

The delegation breathed a sigh of relief and the incident for them was closed.

Notable Gathering. Eleven Hundred Diners Attend Banquet to Roosevelt.

Chicago, Ill., September 8.—Theodore Roosevelt arrived in Chicago from Freeport, Ill., at 5:20 o'clock this evening. He was given a tumultuous greeting at the Wells Hotel, escorted by details of motorcycles and United States police, he was driven to the Congress Hotel, where another great throng awaited him.

At the hotel he was the guest of honor at an elaborate banquet given by the members of the Hamilton Club. Chicago, September 8.—Theodore Roosevelt, who was greeted by an entourage of 1,100 diners, among whom were several United States Senators, Governors of States and other notables. Hundreds of people who had been unable to obtain seats at the banquet thronged the corridors of the hotel, in which Colonel Roosevelt stopped, waiting for a chance to hear or see the former President.

Governor Charles S. Deenen delivered an eulogistic address in welcoming Colonel Roosevelt to Illinois and Chicago. John H. Bampton, president of the Hamilton Club, introduced the club's chief guest to the expectant diners.

Among the fifty men seated at the speakers' table were Joseph C. Cannon, Speaker of the House of Representatives; Charles W. Fairbanks, former Vice President; Albert B. Beveridge, William E. Borah, Robert J. Gamble and Albert B. Cummins, members of the United States Senate, and Governors Deenen, W. R. Stubbs and R. S. Venable. Congressman Nicholas Longworth, Colonel Roosevelt's son-in-law, and United States Senators J. C. Burrows and W.

It has been decided that the Chesterfield county fair will be held at the county seat, the town of Chesterfield, on October 10 and 11. The last Legislature passed a bill enabling county boards of supervisors to appropriate money for these fairs, and the Board of Supervisors of Chesterfield board an appropriation was made. The sum given by the Board of Supervisors will not be enough to cover the expenses of the occasion, but those having the matter in hand feel confident of overcoming all financial difficulties.

It is proposed that a state fair will open with corn prize day, which is scheduled for Monday, October 24.

In the Police Court. The Mayor's Bridge Commission appointed to select a bridge proper for the purpose of constructing a new bridge will meet in the City Hall next Thursday. An ordinance was presented at the meeting, and the Council by C. C. Jones asking $350,000 for the erection of a new bridge according to the terms of consolidation. Mrs. H. W. Clarke and children, who have been visiting in Tennessee for the last several months, have returned to their home.

Mrs. E. E. Talcott, who was badly injured in a street car on the Fifth Hill line some time ago, was taken to the Memorial Hospital yesterday morning for treatment. Her injuries are considered serious, but it is expected that she will recover.

Alden Smith, of Michigan, were also near the speakers.

Members of the Hamilton Club planned to make the banquet not alone the big event of the day in Chicago, but, if possible, the big event of Colonel Roosevelt's Western trip. The demand for seats was so great that the original plan to limit diners to 500, who could be seated in the gold room, was abandoned. It was then arranged to accommodate more than twice that number by using a second banquet hall at the hotel.

Following the banquet Colonel Roosevelt was escorted to a reception room in the Elizabethan room of the Congress Hotel, which had been transformed into a representation of an African jungle. Colonel Roosevelt was pleased with the decorative innovations.

Hundreds who had been unable to secure seats at the banquet board were admitted to the long line of guests at the reception, which did not terminate until shortly before the Roosevelt party was ready to take the train for Cincinnati and Butler.

Probably owing in a measure to the interest aroused by the sensational Lorimer incident, the throngs of curious people in and about the hotel increased after the banquet had opened until the police expended considerable difficulty in handling the crowds.
